CONFLICT OF INTEREST

UCC Foundation believes that it is important for scholarship readers to avoid the appearance of a conflict of interest while reviewing applications and conducting any other selection committee business. Readers must be able to score and rate applicants without potential or perceived influence caused by a conflict of interest. Readers must evaluate the eligibility of applicants without bias and make their ratings based on the established objective criteria.

A conflict of interest can occur when an action of a reader or donor results in a direct financial benefit to a person closely related to/known by the donor or reader. A conflict of interest may also occur if a reader scores the applicant without considering objective criteria for the scholarship.

- No readers or members of the scholarship selection committee shall be eligible to apply for UCC Foundation scholarships.
- If a family member of a reader or member of the scholarship selection committee has applied for UCC Foundation scholarships, that person will declare a conflict of interest and will not participate during the review and selection process (“Family member” is defined as spouse, parent, child, stepchild, adopted child, sibling, niece, nephew, grandchild, step-grandchild, or in-law).
- Current UCC students are not eligible to review scholarships.
- UCC faculty and staff are asked to refrain from reviewing any of their own students or students that are known to them.
